Virtual Memory

If a computer processing a file or playing a video that their size is bigger than RAM it uses a technique called Virtual Memory Which means copying lesser used RAM contents to the hard drive to free up space. This memory is then moved back and forth as required until enough RAM is freed up until swapping isn't needed anymore.

This process is called swapping, and the file on the Hard Drive is called the Page File.